Membership Levels

Advisory member

Eligibility: Organizations with soil health as a key part of their mission. They are actively involved in education, research, or technical assistance that lead to increased implementation of soil health practices.

Responsibilities: These are voting members that are responsible for the functioning structure of the Coalition. They are involved in the financing of the organization, articulate the common goals & objectives for the Coalition, and set the agenda for quarterly meetings. Regular documentation of soil health efforts and routine reporting of activities to the Coalition. Advisory members must maintain a 50% attendance rate for meetings and/or events. Advisory members are eligible to serve on committees.

Supporting member

Eligibility: Non-profit organizations representing a constituency with soil health interests.

Responsibilities: To advocate for soil health practices, direct people to our Coalition resources, and support/promote Coalition activities. These are non-voting members that have the opportunity to contribute to the dialogue but are not responsible for the functioning structure of the Coalition. Minimum meeting attendance is not required.

Business member

Eligibility: For-profit businesses that are in alignment with the Coalition mission statement.

Responsibilities: These are non-voting members that need to demonstrate at least one soil health publication or activity per year. They are expected to advocate for soil health practices and help promote Coalition activities. Use of the Coalition logo does not imply endorsement of products or services.
